ROBERT SMITHER.

June 7, 1794.

On Saturday the 24th instant a numerous meeting of respectable Citizens from different parts of this State assembled in Lexington; and after taking into consideration the degraded and deplorable situation of this Country, both as to its commerce and protection; and coolly deliberating thereon, the following Resolutions were adopted:—

- Resolved,
1. That the inhabitants West of the Appalachian mountains, are entitled by nature and by stipulation, to the free and undisturbed Navigation of the River Mississippi.
2. That from the year 1783 until this time, the enjoyment of this right has been uniformly prevented, by the Spaniards.
3. That the General Government whose duty it was to have put us in possession of this right, have, either through design or mistaken policy, adopted no effectual measures for its attainment.
4. That even the measures they have adopted, have been uniformly concealed from us, and veiled in mysterious secrecy.
5. That civil liberty is prostituted, when the servants of the people, are suffered to tell their masters, that communications which they may judge important, ought not to be intrusted to them.
6. That we have a right to expect and demand, that Spain should be compelled immediately to acknowledge our right, or that an end be put to all negotiations on that subject.

7. That the injuries and insults done and offered by Great Britain to America, call loudly for redress; and that we will to the utmost of our abilities support the General Government in any attempt to obtain redress.

8. That as the voice of all Eastern America has now called on the President of the United States to demand that redress of Great Britain, Western America has a right to expect and demand, that nothing shall be considered as a satisfaction, that does not completely remove their grievances; which have a stronger claim to satisfaction, both from their atrocity and continuance.

9. That the recent appointment of the enemy of the Western country to negotiate with that nation, and the tame submission of the general government, when we alone were injured by Great Britain, make it highly necessary, that we should at this time state our just demands to the President and Congress.

10. That the inhabitants of the Western country have a right to demand, that their frontiers be protected by the general government, and that the total want of that protection which they now experience, is a grievance of the greatest magnitude.

11. That the attainment and security of these our rights, is the common cause of the Western people, and that we will unite with them in any measures that may be most expedient for that purpose.

12. Resolved, As our opinion, that measures ought immediately to be taken, to obtain the sense of the inhabitants of this State at large, that no doubt may be entertained of their opinions and determinations on these important subjects; that we may be able when it shall be necessary, to communicate as a State, with the other inhabitants of the Western Country.

13. Resolved, that it be recommended to each County in this State, to appoint a committee to give and receive communications on these subjects; to call meetings of their Counties; and when it may be judged expedient, to call upon the people to elect proper persons to represent them in Convention, for the purpose of deliberating on the steps which will be most expedient for the attainment and security of our just rights.

By direction and in behalf of the meeting of the Citizens of the State of Kentucky.

FRANCH NATIONAL CONVENTION.

A secretary presented the substance of eight hundred Addresses from various communes and political societies, celebrating the Convention on their labors, and entreating them to continue at their posts, till the triumph of liberty was completed.

We give the following as a curious specimen of the addresses:

The republican society of Cognac congratulated the Convention on its labors. "It is from this incorruptible mountain that the volcanoes with which all our hearts have been inflamed, have issued. From its summit has it poured that thunder which has made tyrants tremble on their thrones, and filled the hearts of those satellites who surround them with fear. No peace, no truce, as long as these wretches shall have their satellites in arms against our country. Declare to them in the name of 25 millions of souls whom you represent, that, so far from treating with them, during the approaching spring, the tri-colored flag shall wave on the walls of London:—Tell them, in the name of Frenchmen, that the Thames, dyed with the blood of the English, shall teach them how to regard a nation, fighting in defence of its rights; declare to the fanatics of Spain, that the republican soldiers, whilst they make them feel the force of French bayonets, will bring to the crucible of the Republic those idols of gold which they are foolish enough to worship. Tell the imbecil Austrian that we will refuse to treat with him till he shall have consented that the Rhine form the line of separation between a nation of freemen and a nation of slaves. Announce to the tyrannical Prussian that he will never obtain his pardon from the French Republic until he return home & make confession of his crimes. Declare that Holland shall never experience our lenity without paying the expense of the war in which she has become a party."

COMMUNE OF PARIS, March 7.

In consequence of some seditious movements which have lately appeared in this capital, the administration of police have issued the following

PROCLAMATION.

Citizens! some new plots are at work. The enemies of liberty are every where uniting. Wicked men do not content themselves alone to monopolize and create a seditious scarcity, but they attempt to take advantage of their crimes, by exciting the people to insurrection. Anonymous letters are in general circulation, in which it is recommended to disarm the citizens, to dissolve the convention and the constituted authorities, and to demand a chief.—Judge what must be the tendency of such writings and expressions.

Citizens! it is time for you to rally, with more strength than ever, around the convention; give confidence to your magistrates; let every man watch, and soon will your enemies be forced to hide themselves in their lurking places.

(Signed)
The Administrators of Police.

February 2.

The National Convention after hearing the report of the committee of Public Safety, Decrees:

Art. 1st. All captains and officers of the ships of the line of the Republic, who shall strike to an enemy, whatever may be his number, unless his vessel shall be so disabled as to run the risk of sinking, and that he would hardly have time to save his men, will be declared as traitors to their country and will be punished with death.

Art. 2. All captains and officers commanding any frigates, sloops of war, or any other vessel, that shall strike to any force, unless double theirs, and previous to having sustained the same damages as above, will suffer the same pain.

Art. 3. When a ship, frigate, sloop of war, or any other vessel of the Republic takes a vessel from any enemy one third stronger—an account will be given to the Minister of the Marine of such valorous actions as tended to the taking of such vessel—and those will be promoted, and their pay increased, to that of a next superior officer, and three hundred livres, paid to the crew for each gun the prize is armed with.

BRUSSELS, February 20.

The head quarters of the Austrians will be this evening at Valenciennes. M. de Clairfay will command 20,000 men at Tournay: The Prince de Cobourg 40,000 at Solmes, between Carteau and Cambrai; and the Prince of Hohenlohe 20,000 on the banks of Sambre. There will be also 9000 men between Beaumont, Maubeuge, and Philippeville; 19,000 Dutch troops and 12,000 Austrians, will protect Namur; and M. de Beaulieu will have 9000 at Arion. Such are our dispositions. The 15,000 Austrians that are at Tieves will be charged to cover the Electorate. The English, Hessians and Hanoverians alone, are charged with the defence of West-Flanders from Menin to the sea.

LONDON, March 17.

Letters brought by capt. Savage of Camilla, who sailed from Virginia the 18th of February, state, that on the day on which he sailed, two French men of war of 74 guns, two frigates of 40 guns, and two of 18 and 16 guns, were turned into Hampton-Road; the Ambuscade and two other French frigates were already there. In consequence of this intelligence insurance to America has arisen from five to eight guineas per cent.

Dr. Priestly preached an excellent sermon on the First Day, from this text, "Repent, for the kingdom of Heaven is at hand;" in which he investigated the scripture prophecies, which seem to place in the world. It is remarkable that his sermon was printed beforehand, and that he delivered it from the printed copy; probably to secure himself against the consequences of such gross misrepresentations as sent poor Winterbottom to Newgate.

March 18.

The Dutch squadron at anchor in the port of Leghorn, has no other object than to strengthen the good understanding which subsists between the states-general and the regency of Algiers, and has considerable presents on board for that purpose. This squadron, however may clear the Mediterranean of French corsairs which infest it.

A letter from Deippe, dated the 27th of February, and brought by a fishing boat, contains the following interesting detail respecting the army of the royalists.

The army augments daily: it at this time consists of above 60,000 men, armed and divided into troops, exclusive of a number of brave royalists who have retired for a time, and who begin to rejoin it.

The Limousin is in a full state of insurrection, and they hope will be able to join the royalists of La Vendee.

In Lower Normandy 7000 men have taken up arms, under a brave commander.

Assemblies are also taking place at Deippe, against whom the convention have sent troops; but they desert, or refuse to march. In fact every thing promises a general insurrection.

March 19.

Letters from Leghorn state, that general Paoli having heard of the surrender of St. Florence, marched against Bastia, at the head of 6000 Corsican royalists. Being arrived at a proper place, he gave a signal to the British squadron, which was then off that part of the island. The British ships of war immediately approached, and landed the troops within sight of Bastia, and at the distance of four Italian miles from it. Immediately after, Bastia was blockaded by the combined British and Corsican troops, who erected different batteries, and intimated to the republicans by a summons, that they must surrender the fortress in 24 hours. The matter of the above vessel adds, that at his departure he heard a cannonade.

The captain of a Tercane which arrived at Leghorn from Porto Ferraro, deposed, that he heard a cannonade, which lasted all day long on the 25th, and seemed to proceed from Bastia.

The people of Paris appear to be by no means disposed to an insurrection. Robert, popular as he is, has been foiled in his endeavors to produce one against Camille Desmottins, Fabre d'Églantine, and other deputies; and when an address was published by the administrators of the police, on the 6th inst. requiring the people to rally round the convention, the popular societies of each section unanimously resolved to obey the requisition.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,

February 1.

French officers in British pay.

Major Mailard said, he rose to ask a question which the secretary of state (Mr. Dundas) said he was not prepared to answer last night. The right honorable gentleman had now had time to inform himself of that, respecting which he ought never to have been in want of information; and he desired to hear from him explicitly whether or not there were French officers employed as aids-de-camp to the Earl of Moira, and receiving British pay.

Mr. secretary Dundas said, he felt it his duty to give no explicit answer to any such question. His opinion was, and he begged to be understood as giving only his private opinion, that the Earl of Moira had a right to employ such instruments as he might think most fit for executing the service with which he was intrusted. To mention the names of French officers in any way contributing to the operations of war, was a matter of much delicacy; and he should decline answering any question, whatever might be the motive of putting it, that tended to disclose measures, the success of which might depend upon secrecy, unless he was commanded by the house to answer.

Major Mailard said, he had asked no question that could be supposed to indicate a wish of disclosing measures, which ought to be concealed. He understood from good authority that there were French officers employed under the command of the Earl of Moira, and in British pay. If such was the fact, it was contrary to law, and a fit subject of enquiry by the house of Commons. He was ready to admit that the situation of such French officers was delicate, and that their services might be useful; but if they were to be employed in a legal way, the delicacy of their situation would not be violated, and their services would not be less important. All the army under the command of the Earl of Moira must know if any such officers were employed, and therefore to tell the house of Commons would not be disclosing any state secret. If the motion he was now to make should not be assented to, he should take another opportunity of bringing the subject before the house. He moved, that an account be laid before the house of any officers, natives of foreign countries, now in service under the command of the Earl of Moira, and receiving British pay.

Mr. Grey seconded the motion. It was said to be dangerous to disclose the measures of government during a war; but the departure from the principles of the Constitution, which, under pretext of supporting it, they were daily led to betray, was much more dangerous. The secretary of state said that the Earl of Moira had a right to employ such instruments as he might think fit for executing the service with which he was entrusted. He would tell the right honorable secretary what the Earl of Moira had not a right to do. He had no right to employ foreign officers in British pay within this country, without authority of Parliament. If the motion should not be carried, he took this opportunity of giving notice, that he should again bring forward the subject, and the landing of Messian troops.

The motion was negatived, and the house adjourned till Monday.

SATURDAY, June 14.

The following account is given by a Citizen of Western Pennsylvania on his way home from the Illinois, which place he left the 22d of last month:

"The Delaware and Shawanese Indians living on the other side of the Mississippi, on the Spanish territory, who had been sent last spring by the Spanish government, under the conduct of a French trader to invade the territory of the United States, and watch on the Ohio and Cumberland rivers, after having committed several violations upon the same territory, had lately retired contrary to the intentions and wishes of the Spanish Officers. These last ones suddenly disappointed, have made several attempts to keep them at their service and for that purpose have held several councils with these Indians who have still offered the most powerful arguments and the most consistent reasons to retire and avoid any hostile measures against either the Bad French, or the Bad Americans as it was told them alternately. The principal ground they bear upon is this, that they have deserted their native country and their own land, even their friends, who still oppose the American Army and had done so for the sake of peace; therefore, since they had sought peace at so dear a price it would be inconsistent to give it away for a cause which is a stranger to themselves; they also observed that their misfortunes and the hard fate to which their friends were reduced, was the consequence of their impudently meddling in the war between the British and the Americans. That henceforth they never would share or partake in any thing with wars raised between the white people. That as for themselves, they would fight their own battles and settle their quarrels, if any, with the red people. They also mentioned in Council, that when the Americans offered presents to their friends among the Indians, they always recommended them to remain still and peaceable, while on the contrary they (the Spaniards) made them presents to bring them to trouble and disturbance. In consequence of all these reasons so alleged by the Indians, they always recommended the repeated attempts made by the Spanish government to set them again at a mischievous activity, they all without exception, have left Cape Girardo and their neighbouring villages and did go ea-

wards the heads of Wameg river to settle and plant corn there, which is about 150 miles off their old Villages. The Spanish Government have also met with another disappointment with the Chickasaw Indians. Out of seven Indians they had deputed to the Chickasaw nation, to raise them against the United States, six have been killed by the Chickasaws at the first hint they gave of the cause of their mission, the other one had but a very narrow escape and came back to New-Madrid, being half starved quite naked, even without a gun, carrying nothing with him but the news. Nevertheless, whatever may be the effect of the ill success to the Spaniards, they solace themselves and even delight in the expectation of future mischief to be done by a number of Cherokees they have called to settle at Cape Girardeau, to fill up the vacancy that has taken place by the removal of the other Indians. Those Cherokees though not so numerous as the Delawares and Shawanese, are infinitely more dreaded. They are at this time the highway-men and assassins of the lower part of the Ohio, and the Spaniards lodge them and board them for that purpose. Several traders who intended to bring peltry from the Illinois up to Pittsburgh, have been prevented of it for fear of being plundered & massacred with their crews. Mr. Farmerone of the supreme judges of the Western territory being well aware of the impending danger on the Ohio, is detained at present at Post St. Vincennes, waiting for an answer of the Commandant of St. Louis, of which he begs the interposition or protection towards this Cherokee banditti, so that he can be secured from their attack or insults, during his official journey to the Illinois, where he is going to hold the General Court. Thus not only the Citizens of the United States are impeded by the Spaniards, in carrying on their trade or travelling on the waters and territory of the union; but even Public Officers, Supreme Judges cannot any more hold their courts or perform public duty, without the previous consent or interference of a Spanish Officer. Such is the debased condition of our country! Such are the pernicious consequences of the neglect and contempt Congress has always manifested for this unfortunate part of the union!!

The following is extracted from a Glasgow paper:—

A reward of two hundred pounds is offered in Tuesday's Gazette, for the discovery of the person or persons guilty in writing or publishing the following seditious Hand Bill, which has been posted up on the walls of Norwich, and circulated among the inhabitants of that town and its vicinity.

"To all real lovers of liberty, my friends and fellow-citizens. "It is with the greatest joy I congratulate you on the defeat of the combined tyrants: Be assured that Liberty and Freedom will at last prevail. Tremble O thou oppressor of the people, that reignest upon the throne, and ye ministers of state weep! for ye shall fall! Ye who grind the face of the poor, oppress the people, and starve the industrious mechanic—My friends ye are oppressed, you know it—Revenge it! Lord Buckingham, who died the other day, had thirty thousand pounds yearly for setting his—a—in the house of Lords, and doing nothing—Think of this ye who work hard, and have hardly a crust to put in your mouths: think how many wretched it would have made happy—in short my friends, Liberty calls aloud, ye who will hear her voice, may you be free and happy: he who does not, let him starve and be DAMNED."

"Sunday, Sept. 14.

"N. B. Be resolute, and you shall be happy—he who wishes well to the cause of Liberty, let him repair to the Chapel Field, at five o'clock

Three Hundred DOLLARS REWARD.

WHEREAS the common gaol of the county of Richmond State of Georgia, was broke open on the night of the Twenty-Sixth of February, 1794, and Beverley Allen, charged with the murder of the late Robert Forsyth, Esquire, escaped therefrom: A number of the citizens of Augusta hereby offer a reward of THREE HUNDRED DOLLARS SPECIE, to any person or persons who will apprehend and secure the said Beverley Allen, in the aforesaid common gaol, in addition to the reward of SEVENTY-FIVE POUNDS offered by his Excellency the Governor, in his proclamation of the 27th ult.

The money will be paid by Mr. M'Millan, on producing the Sheriff's receipt for the body of the said Allen.

N. B. The above mentioned Allen, is upwards of 37 years of age, about 5 feet 11 inches high, smooth complexion, his hair rather of a dark colour, and loose about his ears. He is known in Virginia and in all the states to the Southward thereof, as a Methodist Preacher.

Mr. Bradford.

I WAS surprised to find in your last Saturday's paper, Beverley Allen, the murderer of Robert Forsyth Esquire, described as being known in Virginia, and in all the states to the Southward thereof, as a Methodist Preacher; when any gentleman that would be at the trouble to read the printed minutes of the Methodist conference for the year 1793, might see that he has been publicly excommunicated from the Methodist connexion for several years, and therefore cannot be known as a Methodist Preacher.
